Died December 3, 1933.

(Extract from a telegram of sympathy from Bernard M. Baruch.)

Wise and unselfish in council--fearless in thought and action-- unflinchingly loyal to his friends and to the highest of ideals--gentle and tender--always thoughtful and solicitous of the disadvantaged and unhappy--ever mindful of and responsive to his obligations and duties as a citizen and American--we shall not soon see his like again.

In the meeting place of the souls of the truly great there will be welcomed as an equal the one we have been privileged to know so well and love so much.
