Why are Trade Agreements important to American Agriculture?

- GREATER ACCESS!!
- Enforcement of Trade Agreements is accomplished by committees
- Preferential tariff treatment
FTA Committees

- Sanitary Phytosanitary (SPS) Committee
  - The objectives of this Committee is to
    - help each Party implement the SPS Agreement,
    - assist each Party to protect human, animal, or plant life or health,
    - enhance consultation and cooperation between the Parties on sanitary and phytosanitary matters, and
    - facilitate trade between the Parties.

- Technical Barriers to Trade (TBT) Committee
  - This Committee is responsible for
    - addressing issues relating to the development, adoption, application, or enforcement of standards, technical regulations, or conformity assessment procedures.
Preferential Tariff Treatment

- The WTO Bound Rates are no longer relevant.
- The countries’ applied rates in most cases no longer apply.
- In almost all cases the negotiated tariff rate results in a zero percent tariff or a staged tariff that reduces to zero.

What’s Next?

Trans Pacific Partnership

• The TPP is a potential platform for economic integration across the Asia-Pacific Region that will advance U.S. agricultural interests with the fastest growing economies in the world.

• Stakeholders will have an opportunity to voice opinions on Mexico’s and Canada’s membership during the Congressional review period. Federal Register comments were due on September 4.

• The United States and other TPP members are continuing bilateral consultations with Japan. We have made progress and are continuing our dialogue. In order to join the TPP, countries like Japan must be prepared to negotiate market access for all products and to address specific issues of concern to the United States, including those related to agriculture.

• The next (15th) round of negotiations is scheduled for December 3-12 in Auckland, New Zealand.
